

Dear Sir: I saw you state on t.v. the other day that 85% of the people have cable and therefore choice. I want you to know that that is a lot of, excuse the language, bull. Also please note that if 85% have cable, then 15% do not. You are talking about some 40 million people as meaningless. I'd like to point out that some of you out there may have 500 channels to turn to, but even you won't like it when you keep turning the dial but the picture remains the same. AND THAT WILL HAPPEN. IT IS HAPPENING RIGHT NOW. IT HAPPENS TO ME EVERY DAY.

What America needs is de-consolidation. What America needs is people with guts to stand up for what is right for the people, not for greed and self interest.

Let's face it. All those trips are nice but who wants to be remembered as the one who sold out America.
